Q: How to build a WiFi Network with Bluetooth Access Points? I am trying to build a WiFi network which has Bluetooth Access Points and Hotspots. I am able to connect the 2 WiFi Access Points with Bluetooth using Bluez. But I am confused on how to do the same with the Hotspots. The hotspots work just fine if connected directly to WiFi Access Point. Is there a way I can establish a hotspot using the WiFi Access Points? A: The Bluetooth Access Point has to have the same SSID as the WiFi Access Point. From SSID The SSID (Service Set Identifier) is the network name that the device will advertise. The name is usually the full legal name of the network, such as "ABC Company" or "Home" for IEEE 802.11b access points. This name is what the client will use when scanning for available networks. If you are having the same SSID for both, it is working fine. If your WiFi Access Points use a different SSID than your Hotspots, it would be a different story. and " * * * the district court is empowered to enter a declaratory judgment * * * when the proof makes the existence of the facts essential to the court's jurisdiction and the requisite facts appear in the record." [6] The Missouri Court of Appeals in Roach v. Roach, supra, held that a district court's order denying injunctive relief and declaring void a deed executed by the husband in support of his wife's petition for divorce was appealable. The district court had stated in its order that " * * * the Court does declare the defendant's deed conveying title to himself and wife as community property * * * as void and of no effect, * * * " (emphasis added).
